The Inward Look of a Man

into himself is what counts the most in living his life

There are many thousands of young fellows in our universities and colleges today, well born, bearing noted names, some of them rich, handsome, popular, but neither books, graduation, diplomas nor high-sounding names alone will give them the high places they are destined to attain unless they do enough individual thinking to find out what is in themselves.

Passing almost every day, and giving a look to a valuable painting by Sir Joshua Reynolds, brings to remembrance a story told of this renowned painter-how a friend of his took him to see a picture by a fellow-artist, then much talked about, to pass an opinion on it.

Sir Joshua said:

"Well, it is a capital composition; correctly drawn, the color and tone excellent, but—but—it wants, hang it! it wants 'that!' " snapping his fingers. Lacking "that!" though it had much else, it was worth but little.

What was Sir Joshua's "that"? What sense does it include that you and I leave out of our daily work? Think it over and keep on thinking and be the best possible sort of a man that you can. John Wananater
